

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A software-based direct memory access (DMA) engine for a multiple processor system eliminates the overhead and limitations associated with conventional hardware DMA engines. In a preferred embodiment, the DMA engine is implemented in a two processor system that includes separate processor buses and uses a store multiple data locations instruction in combination with a load multiple data locations instruction.

5

09847981.050201